

The DC Poet Project

Poetry Reading and Open Mic

Are you a poet? Come read at the open mic Saturday February 17th for a chance at a hundred dollar cash prize, and selection as a finalist in the DC Poet Project! One open mic reader will be given a $100 cash prize, and invitation to compete in the final event for a book contract and $500 dollar cash prize. To reserve an open mic spot visit DayEight.org.

Susan Meehan was the winner of the 2017 DC Poet Project. She worked with Marion Barry on the Police Community Advisory Commission following the riots of 1968, and for more than twenty years as the city's first Patient Advocate for persons in drug or alcohol treatment. She represents a Quaker point of view on the DC Council of Churches, and is its Vice President.

Michael Cameron was a finalist in the 2017 DC Poet Project. He was born in Ft. Worth, Texas, and only recently began writing in a notebook.

Rose Strode was a finalist in the 2017 DC Poet Project. When not writing or teaching, Rose gardens at a Buddhist Temple, and explores the woods with her dog.

Anacostia Branch Library

1800 Good Hope Rd SE
Washington, DC 20020

Saturday, Feb 17
2:00 p.m | Adults

